COMMERCE CITY

Commerce City is a premier engine for industrial expansion, manufacturing, and logistics within the Denver metropolitan area, offering unparalleled multimodal connectivity at the convergence of I-270, I-70, and I-25. Directly adjacent to Denver International Airport, the city boasts the region's largest inventory of strategic, growth-ready industrial land, serving as a vital and trusted distribution base for global logistics giants like Amazon, FedEx, and UPS. This dense network of major transportation corridors ensures frictionless regional and national access, positioning local commercial real estate at the absolute center of Colorado's supply chain.

Complementing this robust commercial strength is a rapid, ongoing residential transformation, highlighted by a booming population that has tripled since 2000 to approximately 70,000 residents. Backed by a young, diverse workforce with a low median age of 34, successful master-planned communities in the northern sector, such as Reunion and Turnberry, seamlessly blend premier housing, retail hubs, and premium recreation like the Buffalo Run Golf Course. This unique economic combination delivers a highly stable, high-growth investment profile that successfully anchors long-term real estate demand, upward demographic trajectories, and institutional industrial credibility.
